

II. Acknowledgements

I am deeply indebted with my assessor, Dr Francois Bernard Duhamel, who, with his insight, patience and humor, and where necessary with his emphasis helped this thesis to leave the realms of thought and ideas and to anchor it in the real world.

This work owes its meaningfulness to the unhindered insights that the Mexican SME and in particular its owners allowed-for. To them and to my interview partners throughout the industry and academia I offer my heartfelt gratitude.

To those who accepted my absence, supported my moods, and lifted my spirits: it would not have been possible without you; and foremost: it would not have been half the fun without you, Silvie.

While the aforementioned proofed invaluable for what is good in this paper, shortcomings and errors of it fall exclusively and entirely into my responsibility.
