

“One of the most interesting facts in the history of the coffee drink, is that wherever it has been introduced it has spelled revolution. It has been the world’s most radical drink in that its function has always been to make people think. And when people began to think, they became dangerous to tyrants and to foes of liberty of thought and action” (Dicum y Luttinger 1999:17).