

To my beloved parents and brothers,

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Special thanks go to Brita Banitz, my thesis director, research advisor and friend for her steady support, advice, willingness in giving me criticism when questioning everything that I wrote. She always encouraged me to go on and reassured me my ideas are valuable and dignified to be said. She was confident of my every professional endeavor in the field of research and Applied Linguistics. As a friend, I have no words to describe the change she has made in my professional and personal growing. She is by far a great inspiration and example to pursue.

I am particularly indebted to my committee members, Connie Johnson for taking the time to read my thesis and her valuable comments that enriched my project. I want to acknowledge her enthusiasm which always showed me the light at the end of the tunnel; and Magdalena Mejía Gómez who kindly accepted to be my reader and contributed with her comments. I am so glad for having her in my committee.

I very much thank to every of the members of the language department at the UDLAP for all the support I received during my MA studies, and mostly at the culmination of it. I feel honored of being part of the team.

Many thanks go to the research participants. They shared their thesis conclusions and gave consent to record one of their most important academic achievements: their BA thesis defense. In addition, they let me rummage in analyzing their identity.

I am grateful to many colleagues and friends. To Fátima Encinas whose advice helped me to contact the right people “writing experts”, in the appropriate moment. I acknowledge Ann Johns, whose ideas and advice to develop my thesis made my position stronger. I grant to Ruth Roux for her advice when defining the conclusions and discussions and for sharing the necessary references that contribute especially to the literature review my project. I wish to acknowledge Luis David Meneses Hernández, a good friend met at the program, for lending me his ear to tell about my research as well as other personal concerns. His friendship and the occasional cellular-jokes made my work more enjoyable.

Last, but certainly not least, I want to acknowledge a special person, my Jedi, Master and best friend, Roberto Criollo, who is very proud of my work and does not mind telling people so. I am grateful for his willingness, support, and advice during this thesis, my academic, professional, and personal life. I am in his eternal debt.

Most importantly, I thank God for all His blessing to live this unmemorable experience.
